

Cookie policy

By browsing outhorn.com Website, you agree on the use of cookies by the Website, so that we can provide security and high efficiency.

Cookies are informational data, text files in particular, that are stored in the terminal equipment of the Website's User, and they allow to use the Website's web pages. Usually, cookies contain the name of the Website they come from, duration of storing them in a terminal equipment, and a unique number.

Cookies are stored in order to maintain user's session on the Website, to adjust the Website to its user's individual needs, and to establish the viewing figures of the Website.

Within the Website, three basic types of cookies can be used: session cookies, persistent cookies and third party cookies.

The user can, at any time, change the cookies' settings. They can be changed particularly in order to block automatic cookie handling in the web browser's settings or to inform the user each time when they are stored in the Website's

User equipment. Detailed information on possibility and methods of cookie handling are available in the software (web browser) settings.

We would like to inform you that disabling cookies can affect the functionality of the Website.